ALLERGY GUIDE - HOW TO USE

Every item we sell has specific allergy data depending on the ingredients. There are 14 main allergen groups.

The chart includes all items, and where necessary, recipes if listed as that on the menu.

If an item has a red box, it means that there is an allergen present. An allergen is determined by the manufacturer's ingredients

If a manufacturer states that there is a 'high chance of contamination', this has been listed as red, so customer must avoid.

Most items are manufactured in an environment that contains certain allergens. This is common industry language. If this has been listed as the case, then the ingredient has been marked as clear.

While we take every care in preparing your food to the highest standards, there is a small chance of cross-contamination. Therefore, we cannot guarantee 100% your item is allergy free.Please let us know about any allergies, and we'll do our best to assist you.
